THe 12th Inſtant the Moſcovite Ambaſſadors made their publick Entry, and two days after were conducted to their Audience of the King, to whom they preſented ſeveral Furrs, &c. in the name of the Czar. Bruſſels, Sept. 12. The Letters from Liege differ by every Poſt; one while they give us great hopes of an Accommodation; and then again they ſpeak quite contrary, and ſay, there is not any tendency to it, and that the Spirits on both ſides being every day more and more exaſperated, it is to be feared theſe ſparks will finally break out into a Flame. The Prince of Parma is ſtill at Antwerp, much diſpleaſed, as is ſaid, with the Commons of this City, for refuſing to comply with his Demands. The Conferences at Courtray are as we told you in our laſt, again ſuſpended, ſo that it ſeems we muſt not expect much from them.

The deſign of cleanſing the Rhine and the Iſſel, and making thoſe Rivers deeper than they now are, does not go on.

Paris, Sept. 17. The Cardinal Grimaldi, Archbiſhop of Aix, continuing to refuſe to Aſſemble the Clergy of his Province, in order to the chooſing of Deputies to be ſent to the general Meeting of the Clergy appointed by the King; his Majeſty has ſent Orders to the Biſhop of Frejus, in caſe the Cardinal perſiſts in his refuſal, to ſummon a Meeting of the Clergy of that Province, and to chooſe Deputies to aſſiſt at the ſaid general Aſſembly of the Clergy.
